

servants for the girls. As an example, Melissa's older sister, Josephine, was a 15-year-old house servant for her aunt Maria Seldon in 1871 and Melissa's teenage son Edgar was likely working on a farm. Only Edwin, Thomas and Melissa were at home. Sons Edwin and Thomas were labourers and probably sources of income for the group.

In the census year 1881, mother Eliza was 60 years old and living with her son Thomas and his wife Elizabeth. Where was Melissa?

There was a Melissa Elliott boarding in Ingersoll in 1881. That would be a possibility, however I am concerned the census age is out a few years. The census listed her as being 18 years of age. In 1871 she would have been 15. Since her mother had moved in with her son Thomas and family and all her other siblings had moved on in the 1871 census, this may have been Melissa and she had given an older age to perhaps satisfy the landlady or enumerator. It would make sense that she was boarding in town as she was not married in 1871 and not living with her mother. No other Melissa Elliott was found in Ingersoll during that time frame.

In February of 1883 Marissa married Andrew Paterson. As a sidebar, they were married in London, Ont. The two witnesses were James and Adelia Rogers who were discussed in Chapter 1 of Book 7 as probable relatives of Melissa's mother Eliza Rogers.

1865 Paterson farm location (McGill Maps)

Andrew Paterson grew up on his family's farm NW of Ingersoll on Con 2 Lot 6 N Oxford according to the 1856 Tremaine Maps from U of Toronto. One of their neighbours to the south was the recently arrived Seldon/Elliott Family from Devon. By the time Andrew was 22, his occupation was listed on the 1881 census as a miller. A miller was a person who operated the equipment to grind grain or corn into flour. There were several mills in Ingersoll and the surrounding area in the 1880s. With proximity to Ingersoll and Marissa living in that town in the 1881 census, they met and were married. By the 1891 census the couple and 2 children were found in the Eldon township area of Victoria County in the Kawartha Lakes, north of Toronto. This would have been a major move for the couple as the distance from Ingersoll was about 280 kms. This would be comparable to moving to a different province today.

Andrew was listed as a store clerk and they appeared to live on a few acres in or near a village. I have not been able to identify which village but am leaning towards Woodville. Daughter Isabella was six and son James Edgar four at the time of the 1891 census. Other records show the children were born in Eldon township so it is easy to surmise they arrived in Eldon by 1885 at the latest. It would be safe to assume they moved there soon after the couples August 1884 London wedding. The reason for the move is unknown.

1891 census – Eldon

The family was on the move again and by 1901 they were in Ridgeway, Ontario. Ridgeway is in Welland County on the shore of Lake Erie and five kilometers west Fort Erie. It is famous as the major battle site of the Fenian Raids that Melissa's brothers JR and Thomas fought in 1866. Andrew was again listed as a flour miller and was making a healthy $624 per annum, well above the average wage. Again, this can be looked at as a substantial move for the family.

Major events happened soon after that. Andrew died on the 4th of January, 1906. His death was in the county of Welland and according his death certificate information probably near or in the small village of Ridgeway. A notice posted in the Ingersoll newspaper of the day indicated such. In the notice, J L

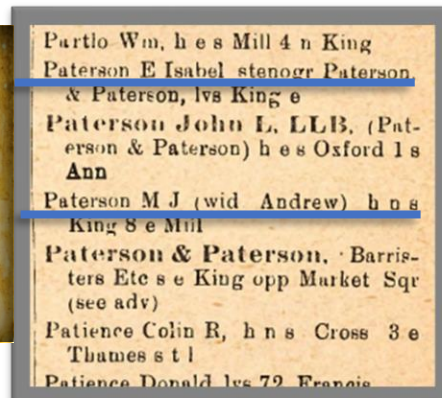

Paterson was Andrew's younger brother and a successful Ingersoll lawyer. Andrew's death certificate gives some insight to the reason for his death.

The cause of death is mostly attributed to "alcoholic excess." It would not seem a stretch that alcoholism may have been the reason that the family moved so often and when doing so moved relatively long distances. He may have had trouble maintaining a job and by moving far away from his previous job he was able to make a fresh start with employment elsewhere. There is a good chance that several moves were missed due to the fact the censuses were 10 years apart. Homelife may have been very difficult for his wife and children. There were no services to assist families dealing with alcoholism in the late 1800s and Melissa's siblings were not close by. Unless widowed, there was still the stigma of a wife leaving her husband. Melissa witnessed the hardship of a separated family when her mother and father parted company when she was six to eight years old. A question does present itself at Andrew's death. Were the children and wife living with him in Ridgeway at the time of his death? There was several Paterson's living in the Welland area at the time. Did he go live with these relatives and the family moved back to Ingersoll? The only fact we know is that Melissa and daughter Isabella were in Ingersoll soon after Andrew's 1906 death. Isabella was a stenographer at her uncle's law firm in 1908. Melissa lived on King St. east of Mill St. in Ingersoll. This was a few buildings up the street from her sister Josephine Toull's grocery store that the Toull's owned a few years previously.

Ingersoll Gazetteer directory 1908

Melissa moved again. This time she travelled to Hamilton to live with her two children in 1910. Son James was there at the time and took in his mother and sister.

The funeral service for Melissa Jane Elliott, widow of Andrew Paterson, late of 316 Herkimer street, was held on Saturday afternoon from the funeral home, 114 Main street west at Bay street, where many friends paid tribute to the deceased. Rev. Dr. John Mutch, of Melrose United Church, of which the deceased was a member, conducted the service at the funeral home. The remains were conveyed to Ingersoll on Sunday afternoon where interment took place in Ingersoll Rural Cemetery. Many old friends in that town were in attendance for the committal service.

It seems that son James Edgar did not make the trip back to Ingersoll after his father's death but struck out on his own at age 19. By the 1911 census, Edgar as he was known, had established himself as a draftsman working in Hamilton. Melissa, by that time, was 53 years old and she and daughter Isabella had moved from Ingersoll to live with Edgar at 117 Kent St. Hamilton.

Melissa was noted as head of the house and widowed. Isabella at 26 was contributing to the household income as a law office stenographer. She was an executive with the Order of Scottish Clans in her later years.

Grand Deputy Special Guest

Miss Isabella Paterson was installed as president at the recent installation banquet at Roberts' Restaurant of the Elizabeth Skene Auxiliary, No. 66 to the Order of Scottish Clans. The occasion was held in honor of the visit of the Order's grand deputy, Mrs. Lena Gale of Toronto.

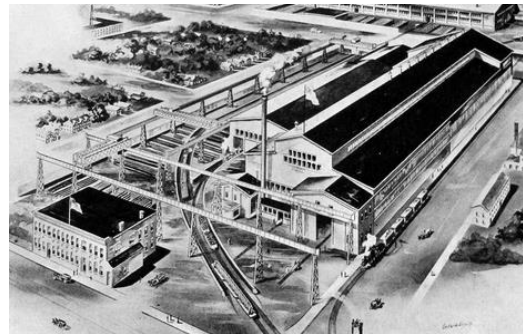

May 1958 – Hamilton Spectator

Isabella "Bella" Paterson

The Order of Scottish Clans was a fraternal and benevolent society. The dual purpose of the Order was to provide life and disability insurance to Scottish immigrants and their descendants, and also to preserve the culture and traditions of Scotland among Americans of Scottish ancestry. Her father was of Scottish descent.

James Edgar, then age 24, added income as a draughtsman (draftsman) for the Hamilton Bridge Company which he worked for throughout his life. The company was noted for designing and fabricating steel bridges and large manufacturing plants. The company supplied steel beams for the Royal York Hotel in Toronto when built in 1928 - 1929.

James Edgar's marriage to Edith Smith was on the 5th of September, 1915 and the immediate addition of son Stuart a year later increased the household to five. During this period, he was a Sargent Major with the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders. Both Edgar and Isabella continued in their occupations in the 1921 census. This time they were living at 26 Bruce St. near the base of the Hamilton escarpment where Edgar was named as head of the house. Ten years later Melissa and spinster daughter Isabella were living at 316 Herkimer St in Hamilton. There was some kind of split ownership agreement between Melissa and a widow named Ella Cummings who also lived in the house. Son James would eventually be sole owner.

Was Edgar a WWI veteran? I have not found any records to indicate his involvement. I also wonder if there was any contact between Melissa and her niece Josephine Beckett. They both lived close to each other during the 1930s when Josie moved from Windsor to Hamilton to be closer to the Beckett family. It would be a shame if they never crossed paths.

This is where the census trail runs out. Several voter lists records spread over 3 decades indicate that Melissa and Isabella and eventually Edgar moved to 316 Herkimer St. in Hamilton

The 1935 voters list still had Melissa and Isabella at 316 Herkimer. Edgar was not with them at that time as I suspect he had moved with his family to another house. He would later return once his wife passed and his only son married. By that point, Melissa had died and Isabella and Edgar lived out their lives in the house.

Melissa died in Hamilton 30 Mar 1944 and was removed to IRC where she was buried with her husband.

Mrs. Melissa Paterson Passes At Hamilton

The death occurred in Hamilton on Friday of a former well known resident of Ingersoll, in the person of Mrs. Melissa Paterson, widow of the late Andrew Paterson, in her 87th year. The family moved to Hamilton a number of years ago and Mrs. Paterson is fondly remembered as the former Melissa Elliott. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Ella at home and a son, Edgar in Hamilton. Funeral services were conducted on Sunday at Hamilton and motored on to the Ingersoll Mausoleum. The pall bearers were nephews of the deceased, Chas. Downing, Albert Elliott, Alex. Smith, Garnet Elliott, Edgar Elliott and James Elliott.

Daughter Isabella continued to live on Herkimer St. until her death 22 Sept 1967 and is buried in IRC. Edgar is buried with the family at IRC after his death 23 Mar 1973 at age 86.

I have not been able to locate any other child of Edgar's except Stuart.

Much confusion reigns on Ancestry sites as to James Andrew Stuart Paterson. It seems there were two Stuart/Stewart Patersons in Hamilton in the 1960s. One ended up living in Guelph and is listed on Ancestry as a descendant of Melissa Elliott. I found information that refutes the claim. A Hamilton Spectator clipping states that Stuart married the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J C Beggs. The daughter was named Evelyn.

The 1949 Voters list had that Stuart and his wife living with his in laws in Hamilton. He was listed as a wire splicer (likely phone company). At some point prior to 1963 this couple moved to Metcalf St. in Guelph.

This Stuart died 26 Aug 1993 and is buried in Guelph's Milgrove cemetery with his wife Evelyn and her parents. Further investigation found that this Stuart's father was found living in Brantford.

Acknowledgments

It has been forty months since Covid led me to this journey of connection to my family. Traipsing through the past has enriched me with knowledge of where I was born and raised in Oxford County. I also understand more about my extended ancestral family and the lives they led. I wish to thank the following people and organizations that put up with what may have seemed as unending requests and constant badgering. I apologize to those I have missed. This project is as much yours as mine. Take a bow.
